A missing British tourist may have gambled away savings meant to pay for her flight home, police say.

A man, who did not want to be identified, told smh.com.au he saw a "dead-ringer" for Frances Mary Embleton, 24, at a Sydney pub on Saturday.

He said the woman told his friends at 3 Wise Monkeys bar she'd lost all of her money at the casino and was thinking of not attending her farewell party.

Police this morning confirmed that the story sounded accurate.

Ms Embleton was last seen near Haymarket in the city on Saturday about 2pm and missed her farewell party that night and flight home on Monday.

The man said a woman strongly resembling Ms Embleton approached his friends about 4.30pm at 3 Wise Monkeys, asking them to buy her a drink.
